"Mama Rose's" Watercolor, 16 x 20 inches, 2006 by

When Opportunity Knocks you have to be ready to respond. The knock on the "Door of Opportunity" came on Thursday, August 17 with a phone call from Jerry Gilmore, the Gallery Director of the Arvada Center. The Arvada Center has already been more than gracious in co-hosting both the 32nd Annual Western Federation Watercolor Societies Exhibition and the 16th Annual Colorado Watercolor Society State Water Media Exhibition for the entire summer of 2007, which is being called the "Summer of Watercolor". Now comes the call from Jerry that the Arvada Center would like to extend our exhibitions by two months, until Sunday, November 11, 2007. What an opportunity! This means that both exhibitions will begin on Friday, June 1 and run until Sunday, November 11. Opportunity is defined as a combination of circumstances favorable for the parties involved. To this opportunity CWS has answered yes.

Now, I know all the arguments about no one likes a long exhibition, what about the patron who purchases a painting and has to wait 5 months to pick it up, artists don't like to have their paintings tied up in a show that long, and all the others. I have heard them all in the past ten days, but the only ones who are presenting these arguments are CWS members. Everyone that I have talked to outside of CWS, and that includes all of the delegates of the other nine watercolor societies in WFWS and over fifty artists that participated in a recent plein air event. Every one of them thought this was an exciting opportunity, and that artists should embrace the chance to have their artwork on display in a place like the Arvada Center for so long.

We have discussed the questions about sales and the length of time from purchase to pickup. The Arvada Center's average sale of artwork is about two works per show for a two-month show, with their highest sales coming from watercolor shows. If this is true, the projection would be at least five paintings for both shows, with the hope that this could be doubled. It is believed that if a person understands that the painting must remain in the exhibition until the end of the show there will be no problem. This information will be discussed with the purchaser at the time of the sale.

As for the question about artists not wanting their artwork tied up for such a long period of time, committing to any national or international show means at least 12-months or longer. If an artist enters the Arts for the Parks exhibition it can be a 24-month commitment, if the artist's work is accepted and selected for the traveling show. We are asking for an 11-month commitment. Artists will enter if they want to whether it is six months or a year. It is a chance we will have to take.

The exposure of this opportunity for the Colorado Watercolor Society and the Western Federation of Watercolor Societies is just too good to pass up. We may have challenges ahead of us but the opportunity just could not be passed by. I hope all of the CWS members will be as excited as the Board and I have been with answering this "Opportunity".

The September General Meeting looks to be an exciting event with an Ice Cream Social and time to visit with old and new members and a display of new member paintings. We will recognize the outstanding service of three long time CWS members: Helen Brainerd, Nancy (Nan) Lund and Carla Rouse. Plus we will award new signature membership to five members and top off the evening with a look at the WFWS31 in Lubbock, Texas. So plan to attend and bring a friend old or new.

Finally, Just a quick word about the Annual Fall Banquet, the Board decided in May to no longer hold the Annual Fall Banquet in lieu of having a social event in September, which would be more casual in nature. It was the consensus of the Board that an Ice Cream Social would attract more of our members.

Just keep painting, just keep painting!!!

WFWS Framing Selection
By David Wicks, Shipping and Handling Manager for the 2007 WFWS exhibit

Your WFWS Committee has selected the framing to be used for the 2007 WFWS exhibit at the Arvada Center. The selected frames are Nielsen anodized metal in Profiles 86 and 87, both in German silver (Finish 14). Profile 87 is a smaller version of Profile 86 and will be used on smaller paintings,

The WFWS Committee has selected Mile High Framing & Services to provide the frames and glass, as well as shop space and equipment for the WFWS Shipping and Handling Committee (ten CWS volunteers) to assemble the frames. Once the juror has selected paintings for the exhibit, Mile High will order the necessary moulding and glass and cut it to size (Note: The Arvada Center has informed us that all paintings, regardless of size, may be framed with glass; we had thought earlier that larger paintings would have to use Plexiglas.)

The individual WFWS societies will ship boxes of the juror-selected paintings (matted, with backing board) from their societies to Mile High (2119 Curtis Street, Denver), where the boxes will be opened by WfWS Shipping and Handling Committee members. The paintings and matting will be inspected by Committee members for conformance with all requirements, and then the paintings will be photographed for the catalog. Committee members will assemble the frames, with assistance as needed from CWS Tuesday night membership meetings resume on September 19th at 7:00 P.M. The location is The First Plymouth Congregational Church at 3501 S. Colorado Blvd.

It has been a long HOT summer, so we are beginning the new CWS season with an Ice Cream Social in lieu of a banquet! This first meeting will be a very informative celebration of the active year CWS has in store. It will be a chance to meet our new members who we ask to please bring one of your paintings to show when you are introduced. We will also take this opportunity to award new signature memberships and for special recognition of service by our members.

So bring a friend or call an old member to participate in the festivities! We will swear in the new board and then enjoy Gene's slide show of the WFWS31 in Lubbock Texas while we indulge in ice cream sundaes and reconnect with friends. This will be a special meeting with a lot of information and inspiration imparted so we hope you will join us....everyone likes ice cream!

Pure joy for a five year old kindergartner-a big floppy brush, dip it in a tin can of creamy ultramarine tempera, press the soft bristles against blinding white smooth paper, a beautiful blue round sun appears, a thin drip runs down to the paper's edge and slips off the easel onto the floor.

Today's joy-walking in a steep canyon filled with glowing light bouncing off the orange stone walls stalking the essence of a place like a hunter searching for sustenance, with limited backpack space and minimal tools of a journal and a handful of pens. Sharing these adventures around the world with artistic friends makes life blissful.

Virtually growing up inside the Art Institute of Chicago led to degrees and teaching. 46 years ago she moved her family and studio to Lakewood focusing in technical illustration and photography. Computer technology now facilitates publication and web design primarily in the health care industry to pay the bills.

Drawing is much more than representing an image. On another, much deeper level, it is a recording of spiritual experience as well. In this way, visual journals make it possible to distill an event in order to be able to transfer it to a painting.

She says: My art is about the forces of the universe as they are interwoven into a harmonic whole. Just as the visual effects of natural forces are metaphors for those energies, my painting is like a record of unseen powers. The action of making drawings connects me to a clearer understanding of this spiritual aspect of life.

For me, art is a healing ritual that preserves and restores my personal harmony. The process brings me to a state of reverence and accountability for all life. For the viewer, through our shared reality, the painting can be a healing ceremony also?

The techniques used require an intuitive mode of thinking which allows the images to seemingly emerge of their own will. However like a musician, keeping the instrument in tune and limber is behind the magic. Drawings, prints and paintings may include watercolor, oil, collage, drawing media and everything but the kitchen sink.

The process is what really matters. Everything else is frosting.

tions and purchases such as a video projection system. A new Grant Committee and Chair should be formed to write and apply for them. The Digital Technology Committee will continue working on digital standards for CWS, including the digital submission of artwork. The Western Federation of Watercolor Societies Committee for CWS will continue to look for new members as WFWS now has 9 member societies. The Committee is also looking for replacements for the current members, some of whom have been serving CWS in this capacity for 9 years! Please consider joining this endeavor.

All in all, this 52nd year of CWS will be an exciting one. See you at the September Social to talk about it.

THE BOARD IN BRIEF

By Janice Hanson

The Board met for a Special Meeting on Tuesday, August 22, 2006 to discuss goals for the upcoming year.

The meeting was begun with a review of last year's goals and how many were met. Significant strides were made in stabilizing our membership, attracting old members to return and finding out what members wanted from our organization (thanks to great participation in the Member Survey of last fall). All the Board and Chair positions were filled for this year. A successful winter workshop (in addition to the workshop traditionally put on by the State Show juror) was put on by Catherine Anderson and returned a profit to CWS. The Collage is in a new format and now accessible on our website. A Digital Technology Committee was formed in anticipation of the need for members to become familiar with the use of computers both for the functioning of our organization and for the future participation in juried exhibitions. Finally, the preparations for the upcoming "Summer of Watercolor" and our hosting of the Western Federation of Watercolor Societies Exhibition are progressing well.

Goals for the upcoming year include the production of a Membership Flyer to hand out for prospective members explaining the benefits of membership in CWS. Another ideal would be to have replacement volunteers for leadership positions as the terms of various Board and Chair positions expire. Please continue to think about how your talents can help to make our organization a success. A greater understanding and tighter control of our finances is another endeavor to be undertaken. New formats for future member shows were discussed, including the idea of a traveling exhibition as venues in cities outside Metro Denver have expressed an interest in showing our work. The Board would also like to have continued input from members regarding the types of workshops they would like to have offered. As a non-profit organization, CWS has the ability to apply for grants to cover workshops, exhibi-
